Jamie Anderson was garnered as “The New Female Director to Watch Out For” by Viva Glam Magazine, and “Top 25 Writers to Watch” by The International Screenwriters’ Association. She has written, directed, and produced five short films that have all won awards around the globe, including Best Director, Outstanding Directing, and Best Dark Comedy. She has won four Telly Awards for Directing, a spot for Craig’s Vegan to the tune of “My Way” which won a 2021 Telly, and a commercial spot for Willow starring Iliza Shlesinger, for which she won a 2023 Telly. She recently wrote, directed, and produced her comedy pilot, “Pumas”.

Anderson is attached to direct a robust slate of feature films, including Pregnant in Las Vegas, which she also penned, for Mainstay Entertainment and Patriot Pictures, romantic feature film My Summer in Rome, which she co-wrote for Filmtrax, the gritty feature film Arigato Tokyo for Talaria Media, and an untitled comedy feature film for Convergent Media. Other projects in development include her country music-centric comedy feature, Countryside, romantic comedy feature, The Birthday Pact, for Producers Peter Sussman and Scott Pardo, a period drama feature inspired by the first woman to become a doctor in the United States, Good Egg, recently acquired by Antoinette Media, and a veteran comedy series for Talaria Media, inspired by her own life, and the book UNSEALED, by former Navy SEAL, Mark Greene.

Jamie Anderson is a screenwriter, director, and producer, living in Los Angeles. Having spent her childhood in Mississippi and Florida, her work is inspired by the South, as well as her life in Hollywood, both of which are an endless wealth of material. With humor, she has a knack for turning the painful into the absurd, always with passion, depth, and heart. After an acting career in film and television, Jamie realized her greatest loves were writing, directing, and helping others shine on screen.
